

Magnetic Fun With The Smartmax My First Animal Train Toy & Giveaway

Having children with a variety of ages can be tricky at times especially while I am homeschooling. When we homeschool I need to keep my younger children occupied so that there are not too many distractions. I do not want to put them in front of the television or give them something to do that they will play with for five minutes and be bored. I like to give them something to play with that is not just educational but something that they will play with for awhile.

Have you seen the Smartmax toys? They are toys with magnets! Magnets that do so many different things. They come in fun bright colors and shapes. Some attract, some repel plus the magnets have different strengths!

My four year old daughter loves her Smartmax My First Animal Train toy. This extra-large train comes with animal parts that easily click onto the bars which are perfect for her little hands. She can build and drive the train. Plus she can play with the animals and the train driver or even mix and match the pieces to create her one of a kind toy!

The north and south poles, attraction and repulsion are all concepts of magnetics that youngsters discover in science class which as a homeschool mom I love! As preschoolers, children can begin to appreciate the thrill of a magnet pulling towards another magnet.

In addition to clicking the pieces together and pulling them apart children can pick up quite a few benefits during play such as hand-eye coordination, logical thinking, color recognition and creativity are stimulated and nurtured with a few rounds of play.

Smartmax offers several different magnetic sets for ages 1 1/2 years and up. My First Animal Train can be purchased for $29.99. How do you keep your little ones busy while learning at the same time?
